Phil Maguire (1989) is an artist and composer from Scotland working with sound. Maguire produces music and sound works for synthesiser and computer that explore emptiness and emergence, of self and of machine. These works are informed by his experience composing, performing, and presenting works across the gamut of Minimalism.

Maguire's works place timbre under the microscope; examining fine details of sound over extended durations. Informed by intuitive use of feedback, chaos, and chance, these sounds are simultaneously static, yet always in motion. These works are released on various independent labels including Dinzu Artefacts, Confront Recordings, 845 audio, and his own wheat flats press.

Maguire performs extensively in the international scene. Recent performances include Klub Gromka (Slovenia), Paviljoen Ongehoorde Muziek (Netherlands), The Complex (Ireland) and Café Oto (UK). Recorded works are frequently presented at festivals and on radio stations globally. These include Radio CASo (Argentina), BBC Radio 3 (UK), L A D I G (Italy), and Dublin Digital Radio (Ireland).

Maguire also composes music for theatre and produces video and photographic works. He performs in Galvanize Ensemble, and has regular collaborative projects with Anne La Berge, Tim Olive, Matthijs Kouw, and Bill Thompson, among others. He is a PhD candidate in Music at University College Cork, supported by a university Excellence Scholarship.

Between 2016 and 2022 Maguire ran verz, a label, concert series, and radio show for experimental music and sound. He lives and works in Cork, Ireland.

press

"Perhaps the most satisfying point of connection is that blast furnaces operate using a method of continuous production, which requires them to run for months, even years without stopping. This is beautifully rendered in a sound that drapes itself upon the base of consciousness, exerting just enough movement to retain active engagement yet sufficiently static to abet thoughts of the infinite; the possibility that these hums, locked into a cycle of non-endings and non-beginnings, will persist in steadfast parallel to time itself."

ATTN:Magazine on Bairds of Gartsherrie

"Everything about aural documents #1 is clean and exact; a precise negotiation of noise, time, space and silence, architecturally arranged into a structure of symmetry, right angles and impeccable counterbalance ... Vivid and irrefutable."

ATTN:Magazine

"Virtually impossible to second-guess what directions Maguire might wish to be taking us, yet while we're here under this steel canopy it seems the most natural place on earth."

The Sound Projector

"A popping, whirring, stuttering thing"

The Quietus on this this

"Surging pulsations and electrical whistles coming on like Christian Fennesz getting heavy with a ZX Spectrum"

We Need No Swords on this this

"The standouts, though, are Phil Maguire's /souch/dron/hum/, a virtuosic play on onomatopoeic wind sounds and fx..."

Choir and Organ Magazine

"...each and every sound present on Rainsweet Stillness, each speck or smudge, is one of abstract, personalized, indescribable beauty."

Harmonic Series on rainsweet stillness

"[zeeschuim] offers a kind of absolute minimalism - pure drone, Platonic drone, drone huge as the sea and profound as your thoughts... One moment suspended in its depths feels enclosed and enwrapped; another - open big as the sky."
