

PHIL MAGUIRE

Phil Maguire is a Cork-based Scottish composer, producing electronic sound works that explore emptiness and emergence, of self, machine, and space. His work draws from extensive experience composing, performing, and presenting works across the spectrum of minimalism. At the core of Maguire's work is an exploration of continuous yet almost imperceptible movement in sound. He places timbre under the microscope in order to examine fine details of sound over extended durations. In doing so, he invites the listener to engage deeply with electronic sound, uncovering moments of stillness that enable profound and personal experiences.

Performing and presenting works frequently across Ireland and internationally, recent performances include Klub Gromka (Slovenia), Paviljoen Ongehoorde Muziek (Netherlands), The Complex (Ireland), Morphine Raum (Germany), and Café Oto (UK). Recorded works are frequently presented at festivals and on radio stations globally, including Radio CASo (Argentina), BBC Radio 3 (UK), L A D I G (Italy), Freecast (Australia), and Dublin Digital Radio (Ireland). His work, both solo and collaborative, has been supported by Culture Ireland, Arts Council England, Ministerie van Buitenlandse Zaken Nederland, Errant Sound (Germany), and VOLSAP Foundation (Netherlands), among others.

Regular international collaborative projects include Galvanize Ensemble (UK), Anne La Berge (Netherlands), Primož Bončina (Slovenia), and Aonghus McEvoy (Ireland). He is a doctoral researcher in Music at University College Cork, supported by a university scholarship, and his work is published by leading sound art labels including Dinzu Artefacts (USA), Confront Recordings (UK), Farpoint Recordings (Ireland), and his own wheat flats press. Between 2016 and 2022 Maguire ran verz, a label, concert series, and radio show for experimental music and sound.
